Quite a stir was created last night by the eacape of one of the lions from the animal show. The beast ran up Davie Street several hundred yards, scattering people in every direction. Finally it ongaged in a fight with a dog, jumped over a side fence and was driven into a small outhouse, where it was recaptured.

The Secretary of State issued charters to two big cotton milling enterprises this morning. The Bloomfield Manufacturing Company, of Statesville, is incorporated with $150,000 capital. The principal incorporators are A. B. Sanders, of Statesville, Charles Webb and Company, of Philadelphia; It. A. Yount, of New Sterling. Then there are a great number of subscribers to small amounts of stock.

The second mill is the Clark Manufacturing Company, of Jonesboro. The capital is $100,000. W. A. The May Festival Held at the Academy of Music Sunday.

A SCARCITY OF MINISTERS

One of the Pastors Said Later That He Regarded This Absence as in the Nature of a Discourto the effect that the institution is a missomer.

Considered in itself, the service was one of an exceptionally high order. The efforts of the meeting, so far as it went, was excellent, and there were several notable addresses. But the fault lay in the attendance. The majority of the pastors of the city were conspicuous by their absence except the Presbyterians and the Christians, who were well represented. For the Baptists but one minister appeared, for the Episcopalians but one, and for the Methodists but three. All save one of these five were on the programme.

The presiding officer was Dr. Witherspoon, prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Semmes, and the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Cooper. There were addresses by Dr. Kerr, Dr. Hannon, Mr. Cave and Mr. Solly. The Episcopalians were not represented among the speakers. Dr. Kerr had to be appointed on Saturday in the place reserved for the speaker from this denomination. THINKS IT DISCOURTEOUS.

"I think it is discouteous to the rest of us," said one of the prominent pastors there. "The meeting is arranged by the Ministerial Union and is a Christian unity feetival. As it was, it appeared anything but that. Why, I understand that some of the preachers didn't even announce that the service was going to be held. I expected a great gathering of the pastors, but I was disgusted when I saw what a silm attendance we mustered. It looks to me as if it is the end of the Christian Unity Festival."

ON CASE OF CAMPBELL

Very Able Statement Made by Mr. A. E. Strode.

THE SENATE'S COMMITTEE

Conception of its Power, Right and Duty in the Prem-

Mr. A. E. Strode, one of the counsel being requested to give an expression of Committee, has submitted the following with interest by lawyers and the public generally:

It seems to me that if the Senate Committee is really in earnest about getting at the merits of the case, they have started with a mistaken conception of their power, right and duty in the premises. For,
I. The power of the Legislature to remove is unlimited, except so far as it may be restrained by the State Constitution.

"The legislative power of a State, ex-tution.

"The legislative power of a State, except so far as restrained by its own Constitution, is at all times absolute with respect to all offices within its reach."—Crenshaw vs. United States, 124 reach."—Crenshaw vs. United States, 128 U. S., 130.

"The grant of a general power to remove carries with it the right to remove at any time or in any manner deemed best, with or without notics" under the "Constitution of the District" of Columbia."—Eckloff vs. District of Columbia 138 U. S., 240.

"The appointment to and the tenure of an office created for the public use to not come within the import of the term 'contracts' intended to be protected by the United States Constitution."

—Crenshaw vs. United States, 134 U. S., 100.

S. 586.

II. Apply the general principles stated above to the present situation in the Campbell case. We find:

A. Section 104 of the Virginia Constitution gives the General Assembly power to remove judges, except that removal tion gives the General Assembly to remove judges, except that removal must be

(1) 'Wor cause."
(2) "By a majority of all the members elected to each house."
(3) "The cause of removal shall be entered on the journal of each house."
(4) "The judge shall have twenty days notice, with a copy of the causes alleged for his removal, before either house shall sat."

(d) "The judge shall have twenty days for his removal, before either house shall act."

ITSELF THE JUDGE.

As to (1) above, it is patent that (a) the General Assembly must itself be the judge of what is sufficient cause for removal; otherwise the independence of the departments of the government would be infringed upon, and we might have the strange anomaly of the Legislature voting to remove the judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals, and then have the court say "that the causes for their removal twere not sufficient and valid in law." And (b) the General Assembly itself must say how it shall be satisfied of the existence of the cause, or, in other words, what proof of evidence it shall require of the existence of these causes, and it is, therefore, entirely within the right and power of the Senate to say that it will accept the findings of the House committee as satisfactory evidence of the existence of the causes, and a fortfort hag it will accept the sworn testimony of witnesses examined by that committee under oath, embodied in the record, which shows that the accused judge was given and exercised every opportunity for the production of evidence in his own behalf at the expense of the State, to such an extent that he was even allowed to bring to Richmond, at the expense of the State, to such an extent that he was even allowed to bring to Richmond, at the expense of the State, over twenty witnesses more than were put upon the stand by him.

CAUSES OF REMOVAL.

As to (3) above, "the cause of removal shall be entered on the journal of each House." Walving for the present the question of the cause of removal, and when passed upon by the Senate in this amended form, may be sent back to the House to be concurred in as amended; and certainly than, the actual causes for removal, and when passed upon the sent back to the Journal of each house." This is so simple and expedient for remedying an alleged defect as to make it idle, indeed, to say that the record is in such shape as to prohibit the Senate from proceed-removal will have been "entored on the journal of each house." This is so simple and expedient for remedying an altieged defect as to make it ide, indeed, to say that the record is in such shape as to prohibit the Senate from proceeding until the House of Delegates shall have amended its record.

As to (4) above, it is not questioned even by the Senate Committee that twenty days' notice, with copies of the causes alleged, was served on Judge Campbell; nor is it denied that he, within the twenty days, filed his answer not asking for further trial or the introduction of other evidence, but, in fact, demurring to the evidence already in How then can it be said that he has not been given the full benefit of every constitutional provision for his protection? surely when the case has been tried and the verdict found, and the defendant alleges no new found evidence nor other just grounds on which to set the verdict saide, should even a court ex meru motur hold judgment in abeyance and insist that further evidence be taken? And certainly a legislative body with full power and with full knowledge that every opportunity for defense has already been given, should not postpone a consideration of the merits of a case where postponement means a denial of justice to the accused; if he be innocent, in not removing the cloud that hangs over him and absolute denial of relief to the petitioners if such action is to be postponed until the judge's term of office shall expire, when, if their allegations are true, his unitness to occupy judicial position for a single term of his court has been demonstrated.

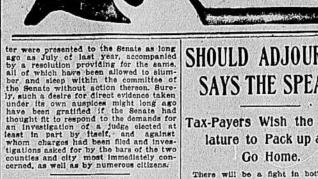

FROCEEDINGS CONFOUNDED.

III. In truth, at least part of the Senate Committee seems to have confounded the proceedings for impeachment, under section 54 does, indeed, purport to set out, at least in part, what shall congitute grounds for impeachment, under section for a single term of his court has been demonstrated.

The play is better than the average melodrama, though all of the rules of the latter have been observed in its construction. The climaxes are well worked up and the interest of the audience is sustained through every scene, until the final curtain.

The company was an evenly balanced one and gave a smooth performance. Elsie Crescy, as Ariulia, the gypsy queen, looked the part, and held the interest of her audience as though she indeed possessed some such influence as was supposed to be hers in the part she played. Mr. E. Laurence Lee, the author of the plece, gave a good portrayal of Milo, the unknown, surrounding the part with a certain air of mystery that increased its interest with the audience, as was intended when the character was frawn. The entire performance was pleasing and interesting, and was witnessed by the usual Monday night audience. relating to an early recess and indications are that every effort will be made to get the body further committed to the proposition of getting through by May 16th. A resolution was adopted in the House yesterday cutting of the introduction of new matter after to-day, but the battle will be renewed on Mr. Hunley's motion to reconsider. The resolution was made: a special order by the Senate for 12:15 o'clock to-day.

In discussing the resolution providing that local or uncontested matter be first taken up and disposed of. Speaker Ryan said last night that the matters of general interest should be first considered; that the House had agreed to adjourn may 16th and still desired to do so; that the tax-payers of the State expected the General Assembly to adjourn on May 15th and that he House would be ready on "A Ruined Life" is a play that will appeal to the majority of theafre-goers. It has in it the element of mystery, which is always most fascinating. The fortune-teller in real life always appeals to the masses. In this drama the story is woven around a gypsy queen, who is supposed to be gifted with supernatural powers. The audience, in following the story, is affected much the same as in the recitation of some strange tale in which an invisible power is manifested and made to control the actions of men.
